

Implications of Angry Young Men Movement in Iran`s Post-war Culture

Iman Minbashi

M.A. student of English Literature, Department of English, Faculty of Literature and Humanities, Khayyam University, Mashhad, Iran

Abstract

There is a period in literature when we see the depth on human anger in society. This era as it called The Angry Young Men Movement, was first established after second world war. Tons of reasons was behind that, like dissatisfied people or people who thought they are fooled by upper-class and government. It has been a while that the culture of Iranians is getting toward anger and violence, presented clearly in cinema. This anger is also rooted in many reasons but here we see that not only kids and youth are mad but also the elder ones are getting angry too. As long as Iran had a war with Iraq years ago and nobody cared about the traumatic parts of the war, this essay implies the features and characteristics of The Angry Young Men Movement in Iran`s culture.

Keywords: Look back in anger, Iran-Iraq war, Angry young men movement, social classes, post-traumatic disorder